BAHRAIN MZ2

122 The climate is typical of the Persian Gulf region, with intense heat and high humidity for 6 months of the year. According to observations for the 10-year period 1942-51, the maximum temperatures averaged 107° to 109° F. in July and August; the minimum temperatures, 83° to 85° F. Corresponding temperatures for January, the coolest month, were 70° F. and 50° F., respectively. The rainfall, which is normally around 3 inches a year, is distributed irregularly between November and May, with the maximum precipitation from December through February. Sand-laden winds, known locally as the shamal, often blow with con-
